Systematic Review Workshops

A systematic review is a high-level overview of primary research on a focused question utilizing high quality research evidence through identifying, selecting, synthesizing, and appraising data.

The Libraries offer in-person, open-to-all workshops tailored to specific aspects of the systematic review process.

Registration is required to attend. Priority registration is given to University of Maryland faculty, staff, and students.

Subscribe to our mailing list to be the first to learn about upcoming workshops!

The University also offer one-on-one consultations upon request that are free to all UMD affiliates.

Did you know? Faculty can request a systematic review instruction session for a class or a department!

We are available to provide instruction and guidance!
